CHAMBER DIRECTORS MAKE IMPORTANT MOVES IN CIVIC AFFAIRS

Written for "The Beach News"
By JOHN J. FITZPATRICK

The directors of the O. B. Chamber of Commerce met in the room of the Better Business association last Tuesday evening, F. B. McElwee, presiding. Secretary McCoy read a letter from the Southern California Auto club in reference to our request for a red warning light at foot of Voltaire street. The auto club promised that the light would be installed in the near future.

The city hall committee reported that they had conferred with the city engineer in regard to the grade of Coronado avenue as requested by one of the owners of property on that street at our last meeting and that no relief can be had at this time, but should another change of grade be desired on that street it can be done when the street is to be paved.

Mr. Dumont reported that the change of the name of the postoffice and the merger into the San Diego postoffice was progressing towards a successful solution.

A committee appointed some time ago to inquire into the necessity of another voting precinct in Ocean Beach on acount of increase in population, reported that the county clerk advises that it cannot be done this year as it would cause a change in the voting precincts throughout the county. As all voters must register anew after January 1st, many new precincts will be made and a change can be made next year without any additional expense.

The request for endorsement of a petition signed by 90 per cent of the property owners on West Point Loma boulevard that the city manager dump excess dirt from street gradings in the slough to prepare for the extension of the boulevard towards Loma Alta, was granted.

Mr. Claspill called the directors attention to the dangerous conditions existing at the southwest corner of the intersection of Newport and Bacon street an autoist going east on Newport and desiring to turn south on Bacon is often met by the street car going north and is compelled to get on the wrong side of the street to keep from getting into a jam. After discussing the matter in detail it was decided that the secretary write the traffic commission to come and investigate and suggest a remedy.

Mrs. A. C. Burch, president of the Woman's club, reported that she had been appointed to direct the drive in Ocean Beach for the community chest and asked the chamber to endorse the drive as well as give their individual support to it. Her request was granted unanimously.

Directors present were McElwee, McCoy, Rankin, Fitzpatrick and Claspill

ESSAYS RECEIVED FROM O. B. SCHOOL CHILDREN IN PRIZE CONTEST

A large number of well written essays on Ocean Beach have been received at "The Beach News" office from Ocean Beach school children in competition for the prize of a five dollar gold piece recently offered by Mr. J. Thos. McCoy, of 4999 Voltaire street. The compositions will be duly read and passed upon in a few days by the announced judges and the name of the winner as well as the winning essay will be published in these columns next week.

LOCAL MASONS CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

Peninsula lodge, No. 620, F. and A. M., will celebrate the second anniversary of its constitution this Saturday evening, November 5, at Peninsula Masonic hall, with a dinner for the members and their wives. There will be an interesting program of dancing, cards, etc.

STRAND THEATRE

Saturday, November 5th, Tim McCoy in "Winners of the Wilderness." A rapid fire, nerve-tingling action romance of pioneering days! Stirring scenes of Indian warfare, intrigue and perils, with the most heart-warming love story in a great while, and it is crowded with action every second of the time. Thousands of Indians and feats of horsemanship that will amaze you. It is a new kind of Western. A News Wekely. A comedy entitled "Ghost of Folly" and "Rocky Mountain Gold," a scenic.

Sunday and Monday, Esther Ralston in "Ten Modern Commandments." What every woman should know. Whirlwind youth and its ten modern commandments for love and happiness. See how they work out in this colorful story of back stage life. The first commandment starts off with Get Your Man, and it is up to the girls to see how it is done. Our Gang in a comedy, "Uncle Tom's Uncle." Topics of the Day and Fables.

Tuesday and Wednesday, double feature nights with two of the best stars and pictures ever seen on one program. Dorothy Gish and Antonio Moreno in "Madame Pompadour." The life and loves of history's loveliest charmer. Also Richard Barthelmess in "The Drop Kick." Here is a picture that has every element of unforgettable entertainment, drama, comedy, thrills, action, and suspense. But back of it all is something that only Barthelmess can bring to you, a picture so thrilling different from any you have ever seen. The News Weekly and "Listen Lena" comedy. This is one of the best shows ever presented for the money.

Thursday and Friday, Lon Chaney in "The Unknown." It's Lon Chaney's privilege to greet you with something off the beaten path in characterization. In this picture he assumes another study, the central figure of a strong yarn of a Spanish circus and the part he plays is that of an armless wonder who performs the almost impossible feats with his toes. Whenever you see Chaney you are always sure of seeing something different done right. The comedy will be Lipo Lane in "Naughty Boy," also the fourth period of "Blake of Scotland Yard," an extended feature that has got the whole family guessing.

First showing in San Diego of the screen test films of "Miss San Diego" (Miss Florence Miller) will be made this Saturday and Sunday.

LIGHTS AND PAVING

A reader says the concrete lamp posts are set along Voltaire street, ready for the lamps, but the tree will obscure the light. An arc light is needed at Bacon and Muir; also at Froude and Muir; also at Cape May and Cable; also at Cape May and DeFoe; also at, but what's the use of naming 'em—there's a lot more!

The rain washed the hill in Long Branch avenue, which was about ready for paving. It should have been finished about a month ago, but was left for some other job. "There should be a demurrage clause in their contracts," says a contributor.

'It Pays To Advertise'

BEACH BOOSTER OUTLINES GOOD POINTS FOR BEACH BUILDING

Written for "The Beach News"
By JAMES P. FROIDE

Dear Mr. Smith: I have read with interest in your forum all this hulabaloo of changing the name of Ocean Beach. How many of the large cities change their names? All the prettiest names in the world will not make Ocean Beach any better nor any "bigger." It takes boosting to make a place. I'm not afraid to say, that there is only about one out of every twenty-five that wants the name changed, that would give ten cents to help boost, and in order to boost, (that is real boosting) you have got to advertise north, east, south and west; in your home paper and outside also. Buy your home paper, send it to your friends; advertise in it, tell your friends to hand it to someone else. And here is another thing! to dig a well, you dig down; to build a house, you build up and to build a city you have got to start in the center. I've been in big cities all my life until seven years ago. I came to Ocean Beach. I've never yet seen a city grow scattered all over. You can't make a business center out of a boulevard district, the city has to grow out to that district, Now, I don't mean this as a knock on Voltaire street, but Newport and Bacon is the business center and the best thing for these real estate men to do is to start at Newport and Bacon and sell and build from there. Fill in the center and then you will get a good town. After the center is filled in then begin to build around it, or in fact the outskirts will fill in itself like magic. Real estate men, business men, chamber of commerce and all other clubs get together and fill in the center. Late to bed early to rise, work like the devil and advertise.

Swim Easy Club Celebrates

The Swim Easy club held a Halloween party at the home of the secretary, Edna Lenhart, 4049 Voltaire street, Ocean Beach last Thursday. All members were present. The committees in charge were as follows: Social committee: Caroline Geffe, Ethel Caldwell; refreshments: Edna Lenhart, Bess Simpson; finance and prizes: Lottie Graeme. (treasurer.)

Members were requested to contribute a fifty word testimony of what swimming had done for them since joiinng the club. Letters were read by the coach of the club. Peggy Mae Hunsaker. One of the prize winners read as follows:

Swimming has made me happy, has made me healthy too,
And given me an interest in everything I do.
All those ups and overs and every little stunt
Has straightened out my liver and straightened up my front;
Muscles that were flabby and breathing that was wrong
Are now just as they should be,
And I'm happy all day long.
MABEL EBERSOLE

This swimming club has been organized two years under the direction

CHRISTMAS SUGGESTIONS BY PHOTOGRAPHER FROIDE

Excellent suggestions for the forthcoming Christmass season are announced by the Froide Photo Finishing company at 1868 Bacon street. Now's the time to get photo enlargements, medallions, picture frams and the like for holiday tokens. Reproductions are made by Mr. James P. Froide from any photograph, old or new, and prompt and satisfactory service is assured. A feature is made of Christmas cards, with twenty-one of the finest assorted styles at the very moderate price of one dollar, this offer being good from now until Santa Claus time.

CARL SCHRODER MAKES AND REPAIRS RADIOS

Friends and patrons of Carl Schroder are enthusiastic in their praise of new radios recently built by him. His latest feature is a five-tube radio, with three dials, loud speaker and all complete for $90, with the exception of an aerial which will be furnished extra for $5. Mr. Schroder also makes a specialty of repairing any and all makes of radios and prompt service is assured by phoning Bayview 0161-J, his workshop being in the rear of his residence at 4840 West Point Loma boulevard.

"Miss San Diego" At The Strand

MANAGER GRUBER GIVES FIRST SHOWING OF FILMS TONIGHT AND SUNDAY

The screen test pictures of Miss Florence Miller as "Miss San Diego" will be given their first showing in any theater, this Saturday night and on Sunday night at the Strand theater, where Manager F. J. Gruber has made special arrangement for the initial presentation. Miss Miller is a popular Ocean Beach young lady, residing on West Point Loma boulevard and her winning of the honor of being "Miss San Diego" is a notable local victory. Go early to get a good seat at the premier presentations of the screen test films tonight and tomorrow night.

LOMA ALTA NEEDS BETTER HIGHWAY CONNECTION

Mr. Kirk Smith,
Editor, "The Beach News,"

Loma Alta! Why where is Loma Alta? Yes it is a part of Ocean Beach, or as we would rather call it—Loma Beach.

We are that isolated part of this community that is connected with West Point Loma boulevard by means of a decayed little foot bridge. All other roads are dangerous but passable.

When the paving contractors look around for a place to dump the surplus dirt they found the very spot at the end of West Point Loma boulevard and some of us began to have visions of a road instead of a path.

But to our sorrow we found that some people are opposed to progress! And this made it necessary to petition the council to continue the improvement started. And be it known we are all of us loyal beachites.

LOMA ALTA

P. S.—Since the recent rains the road through Collier park is impassable and Loma Alta residents have to go all the way around by Wells street to reach the main highway.

ORNAMENTAL LIGHTS HELP PROPERTY SALES

Directly due to the installation of an ornamental lighting system on Voltaire street, John J. McLane purchased through Wenrich and Warren this week, a lot on Voltaire between Ebers and Froide streets. The demand for property on well lighted thoroghfares will very likely give added impetus to the plan for the installation of ornamental lights on Sunset Cliffs boulevard.

POLO SKATING TEAMS PRACTICING AT KICKHAM'S M. B. ROLLER RINK

These are thrilling practice days every Tuesday and Thursday for the polo teams at Kickham's skating rink in Mission Beach. The Ocean Beach line-up and their Mission Beach opponents will be in fine trim for the opening game soon and the championship contests will be more exciting than ever before.

On the Air Next Week

W W. Deuel, proprietor of the Strand Radio Co., announces that the National Broadcasting company will present "Sam Adams," father of the American Revolution, during the "Great Moments of History Hour," over the Pacific Coast Network, on Sunday, November 6, from 9 to 10 p. M. Sam Adams took an active part in the affairs leading up to the Declaration of Independence and these interesting events will be told in dialog.

The Grand opera "Ernani" will be presented by the National Opera company on Monday, 8 to 9 p. m. Verdi's "Ernani" is one of his earlier efforts, and is based on a drama by Victor Hugo of the same name.

The second bridge lesson of the season will be broadcast on Tuesday, Nov. 8, between 8:30 and 9 p. m. As on the previous occasion the game will actually be played by four players in the National Broadcasting studio while the announcer describes the play before the microphone.

The Eveready Hour for Nov. 8, promises to be of unusual merit with "The Rounders," from 9 to 10 p. m.

"The Brief Debut of Tildy" will be the retold tale for the hour from 10 to 11 p. m.

The Vagabonds at a Football Game" is the title of the hour of music to be broadcast on Wednesday from 9 to 10 p. m. A program of classical music will be furnished radio listeners from 9 to 10 over the Pacific Coast Network on Thursday evening, and "Lest We Forget" is the title of the program scheduled for Armistice day on Nov. 11 from 9 to 10 p. m.

As in the past the regular Saturday night revue will be broadcast from 8 to 9 p. m., and the Philco program will be featured from 9 to 10 p. m.

DRUGGIST KRAFT GIVES SPECIAL VOTES EACH WEEK IN "KIDDIE CONTEST"

Parents and friends of beach children are advised of the announcement by Druggist Fred H. Kraft of a special allotment of extra coupons every Tuetsday and Wednesday in the "Kiddie Voting Contest" now in progress at Kraft's Drug store.

Five prizes are given each week and the different weekly winners are eligible to the grand prize at the end of the stated twelve weeks. The competition is arousing wide-spread interest among the young folks who are aided and abetted by their elders. The various prizes are on exhibition in the window at Kraft's drug store where full information concerning the contest is cheerfully given.

"ARMISTICE DAY" CELEBRATION NEXT FRIDAY

There will be special parades and a general celebration next Friday, November 11, comemorating "Armistice Day," which will be nationally recognized as a holiday.

Education Week In Beach Districts

Written for "The Beach News"
By BETTY SEYMOUR

The beach districts are out to make a record, and every man and woman living in this section is asked to be a participant to help roll up this record. We want to roll up a visiting attendance record for the schools in the beach districts during American Education Week, November 7 to 13, when the members of the American Legion and the board of education urge all adults who can to visit at least one school for a short time during the week.

The beach districts cover more territory than any other section of the city, and we have a great many new residents. San Diego is proud of its schools and this section is especially proud of its share of the schools, and would like the new residents, whether parents or not to pay us a visit next week.

On Point Loma penisula we have four schools: Cabrillo school at Roseville, with many pupils from Portuguese families who present interesting studies; the Loma Portal school where the children of our own Navy men are showing what stuff Americans are made of, and making a good record too; the old Ocean Beach school at Sunset Cliffs boulevard and Santa Monica, where many of our business men kicked barefoot through the dust of a past day; and the Point Loma High school.

At Mission Beach two years ago was established a new school. It will have daily and evening programs, so that father as well as mother can pay it a visit. These children are doing well with music as well as other studies. They show a different turn to their exhibits, due to their closeness to the ocean from which they garner many new and strange things to study.

Pacific Beach also has an interesting school at 1580 Emerald street. They are somewhat isolated and would appreciate any visit you would make. Give the youngsters there a chance to show you what they can do.

At La Jolla we have the La Jolla school at 7365 Girard street and the La Jolla Junior High school where some fine work is being done. They will both be glad to do the honors for their schools and are preparing special programs, several of them to be given in the evening.

Just visit whatever school you happen to be passing whether in your district or not. But if it is in the beach district it will help swell the attendance record.

Program For Mission Beach School Education Week, November 7-13

Monday: Health day: Talk to parents by school nurse. Stories to children by school nurse. Health pageant "Mother Goose Rhymes" by primary grades. Health program by intermediate grades.

Tuesday: Regular class work.

Wednseday. Home and school day. Special, Safety Idea worked out by intermediate grades. Safe Living Idea developed in primary grades. 2:30 p. m. P.-T. A. meeting. 3:00 p. m. Address: Supt. Willard E. Givens.

Thursday: Patriotic Day. Classroom citizenship exercises. 1:30 p. m. Address: T. L. Hazzard of American Legion. 2:00 p. m. Flag raising ceremony, primary and intermediate grades.

Friday: Banking day and regular work. 2:00 p. m. Civic league.

POLICE ON THE JOB

Our police were so active on their job Halloween night, that the vandals were not able to get in much of their devilment. "A vigilance committee with a "black snake" would greatly aid the police," says a citizen correspondent.

Business Directory—Alphabetically Arranged
Service for "Strangers Within Our Gates"

OCEAN BEACH is famous as San Diego's greatest residential seaside community and is situated only six miles from the metropolitan district, with which it is connected by fast electric railway service and the paved coast highway. It is the most thriving and populous section of the peerless Point Loma peninusula, with ideal climate, wonderful productive soil and scenery unsurpassed. Wide avenues lead from the heights to the seashore and nearly all streets are paved and sidewalked, with a complete paving program in progress from the bay frontage to beautiful Sunset Cliffs. Ornamental lights adorn the main business section, while modern commercial structures and fine new homes, cottages and bungalow courts are constanly in course of construction. This delightful suburb has exceptionally good schools, churches, civic clubs, mail carrier service and all that makes life really worthwhile as is well attested by the appended list of prominent and progressive business interests:

New CALIFORNIA THEATRE

Everyone who has taken an interest in attempting to solve mysteries is promised the thrill of a lifetime when "The Cat and the Canary" opens as the feature screen attraction at the New California theatre Friday.

"The Cat and the Canary," a Universal production, is the screen adaptation of the great stage success of the same name by John Willard. It has an all-star cast, headed by Laura La Plante, and was directed by Paul Leni, perhaps the most famous of a score of foreign directors who have come to this country in the past years.

Six people, three women and three men, go with an attorney to a supposed haunted house to hear the reading of a will. The attorney is murdered—each of the six persons might have done the killing. How the real murdeder is finally detected is one of the most absorbing mystery tales imaginable. How the story reaches an exciting climax and then ends in a gripping, but logical way, is said to hold the interest far beyond the ordinary picture.

"The Cat and the Canary" embraces a cast that reads like the "Who's Who" of filmdom, Laura La Plante, petite and vivacious blonde star, plays the leading role, while in the supporting cast are, Arthur E. Carew, Creighton Hale, Forrest Stanley, Gertrude Astor, Flora Finch, George Siegmann, Martha Mattox and Lucien Littlefield.

Fanchon and Marco's "Hi-Hatters Idea," the stage presentation accompanying "The Cat and the Canary", is said to sparkle with talent. Edna Covey, is making a return trip to the West Coast as a triumph from Eastern successes. Her comedy dancing has been declared by the critics to be the best of its kind.

The "Hi-Hatters Beauties" against a background of brilliant colors will be seen in dance routines and specialties. Besides these there will also be a number of featured players, including Alfred Brewer, speediest of Russian stoppers, Helen Wright, singer and Gretta Garde, dancer.

CABRILLO THEATRE

Theatregoers are promised a treat when "Two Arabian Knights," opens at the Cabrillo theatre for one week, starting Friday, with William Boyd, Mary Astor and Louis Wolheim assigned to the leading roles.

Famous for his excellent portrayal in "The Volga Boatman," Boyd plays a comedy role for "Two Arabian Knights," in a war-time story with most of the war, but none of the laughs, left out.

The picture was made under the supervision of John W. Considine, Jr., for Caddo Productions, a new United Artists unit, with swiftly-moving and hilarious situations into which a first sergeant and a private get when they escape a German prison camp, in Arab disguise. In spite of their efforts, they land in Arabia and both fall in love with a Emir's daughter. Then the fun begins.

Wolheim, who was the original "Captain Flagg" in the stage presentation of "What Price Glory?", appears as a hard-boiled army sergeant character in "Two Arabian Knights," while Boyd plays the part of an adventure-looking doughboy from Philadelphia, who leads his sergeant into a series of amazing escapades in France, Germany and Arabia.

None of the sordidness of war enters the story, which is concerned with the rollicking experiences of the two buddies, and their near-tragedies contrasting so rapidly with humor that the picture is said to be packed full of laughs from start to finish. Wm. Boyd satifies the ambition of every buck private to lick his top sergeant.

There's More Than Warmth To Gas Furnace Heat For It's Clean and Automatic

When you install a gas furnace in your home you have reached in the thought of the present day, the millenium in house heating. Simple regulators, automatic in their action keep your home at a comfortable temperature without any worry, any hardship on your part.

No need to think of fuel or a place to store it for your supply, when you have a gas furnace, comes from a dependable reservoir, always ready to meet your maximum needs. Then again, gas furnace heat is clean and that means the end of muddy looking ceilings and walls and dull-colored draperies, and therefore a lightening of household drudgery.

HAPPY AND MEMORABLE HALLOWE'EN CELEBRATION

Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Holdridge gave a Halloween party at their home, 2143 Bacon street, for their son, Paul Driscoll and twenty-two of his friends. Everything was carried out in real Halloween style and a good time enjoyed by the following participants: Misses Martha Milligan, Dorothe Milligan, Louise Klair, Vivian Williams, Wane Randolph, Ruth Wiker, Agnes Castien, Isabell Castien, Babe Harris, Mildred Scrivner, Harriet Christenson; Messrs. Willis Doetschnan, Dick Dority, Paul Haas, Bob Ingalls, John Lawrence, John O'Connor, Hayden Ingalls, John Castien, Mervin Clark, Vance Randolph and Paul Driscoll. At 10:30 the table was spread with bounteous good things to eat, sandwiches, nuts, candies, cake and ice cream. Mrs. Castien presented each guest with a little individual mince pie. Little horns were given as favors and the youngsters surely made it interesting until the party broke up about 12:30. Prizes were won by Dick Dority, Paul Driscoll, Vivian Williams and Dorthe Milligan. It was a happy and memorable Halloween celebration.

PAPER WRAPPING PREVENTS BAD BITES FROM BUGS AND INSECTS

Attention has been attracted among English campers and walkers by a device for preventing insect bites on the legs, recently advocated in the London Times by Mr. W. Addison, of Harrow, England. The procedure is very simple. Mr. Addison merely wraps his lower legs with thin, soft paper inside his stockings. Insects which have no difficulty in inserting their biting or sucking mechanisms through holes between the threads of a fabric are baffled, Mr. Addison reports, by the much thinner layer of paper. This paper contains no holes and is tough enough to resist the tiny insect lancets. Mr. Addison uses a good quality of soft tissue paper which is wrapped tightly around the limb, the stocking being drawn over it carefully without disturbing the paper. The method is so simple that it seems well worth trial by the thousands who suffer from badly bitten legs and ankles when tramping or collecting plants or geological specimens in regions infested by insect pests.

When Snakes Bring Rain

By IRVING KING

IN MRS. FANNY BERGEN'S "Animal and Plant Lore" a superstition, common in some sections, is said to be that to kill a snake and hang it on a fence, or a tree, is a sure way of producing rain. In some sections, according to Mrs. Bergen, hanging the snake with its back up will prevent rain; with its back down bring on rain. This, however, may be considered a local frill—though possibly it may have some mythological basis now undiscoverable and eliminated by time.

It is a curious fact that primitive man from the general form of the superstition, which is a very old German one. The old Germans were accustomed to kill a snake and hang him up in a tree when they wished rain, with the serpent's head pointed in the direction from which they expected the wind to come which would bring with it the desired showers. The use of serpents as rain charms prevails today among various peoples living in a primitive state and is evidently a conception of primitive man and a relic of serpent-worship.

It is a curious fact that primitive man frequently performed his devotions by killing the thing he worshiped. A good example is afforded by the customs of the primitive Ainus of Japan with regard to the bear today. This curious "twist" of the primitive mind has never been quite satisfactorily explained, though Sir James Frazer, who has delved deeper into primitive psychology than any other man, has gone far toward solving it. Just how widespread in this country the snake rainmaking superstition is, it is impossible to say; but its habitat extends over a very considerable area.

Doing His Best

Whenever I have found out that I have blundered, or that my work has been imperfect, and when I have been contemptuously criticized, and even when I have been overpraised, so that I have felt mortified, it has been my greatest comfort to say hundreds of times to myself that "I have worked as hard and as well as I could, and no man can do more than this."—Darwin.

"TH' POOR SAP, HE'S GOIN' TO LOSE A GOOD FRIEND IF HE MARRIES HER!"

At Voting Time

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

IT IS a matter of serious concern when votes at the polls on election day are cast by less than 55 per cent of those who have the right of the franchise. The success of our democratic form of government depends upon the interest manifested in the vote as well as upon those elected to bear the responsibility of public office.

When corruption in public offices is discovered we raise a strong voice of protest. When a public official goes wrong we demand an investigation and that the crime be punished. But, in the meantime the public conscience has not only suffered, but the community in which the crime has been committed must bear the ultimate result of the wrong done. Who is to blame? The one who does the wrong? Yes—but the first responsibility rests with those who put him into office, or did not do all in their power to keep him from getting into office. The lethargy of the public mind is appalling in this matter.

The privileges enjoyed by us are made possible through the enactment and enforcement of laws. Laws are made and enforced by those elected for that purpose. In any representative form of government, in the very nature of the case, the ultimate responsibility for the success of that government lies with the voter; and yet the American people are interested to the extent that only a little over 50 per cent go to the polls to vote.

What is the reason for this condition? If we were denied the privilege of the franchise, we would protest in no mistaken language. But, having all the privileges of this right as citizens, why is it not exercised as it should be? Perhaps the answer is that it is a matter of carelessness rather than indifference or ignorance. A government should be ruled by the majority and yet in this greatest and most powerful nation in the world of free governments, the minority rules. Such a condition is a menace to all our institutions.

THE HALLOWEEN PARTY

By MARTHA MARTIN

THERE had been a little girl named Janet who had wondered what the word Halloween meant.

And now it seemed as though another little girl did not know what it meant and was feeling quite sad about it.

It seems to me, too, that it is a word that we've used so often that many of us are not quite sure what it does exactly mean.

And so I am going to tell the story of Miriam and of what her mother seemed to be so much yet to be finished.

They Would All Try to Bite These Apples.

told her just so every one will be sure to know without having to do anything about looking it up.

There was going to be a splendid party at Miriam's house. There were all sorts of preparations for it.

Miriam did not know whether they would all be ready on time, for there seemed to be so much yet to be finished.

But probably the guests who were coming to the party were just as busy, for the guests would bring some Halloween stunts with them, and would doubtless be dressed up.

Of course, Miriam did not know just what the guests would do, but she knew that two of her brothers were going to dress up as old witches and do all sorts of tricks.

Already they were hanging apples attached firmly by strings from a doorway and as soon as the guests came and the tricks began they would all try to bite these apples, which would swing annoyingly away from them!

And there was going to be a dish of flour in the kitchen after supper and the children were all going to try to find a twenty-five-cent piece hidden there.

They were going to hunt for it with their teeth! And there were apples bobbing in a great tub of water.

And these had to be caught by the teeth, too. Some of these held pennies.

There would be fortune telling, too, and Miriam's mother had promised to be the fortune-telling witch who would sit by her caldron which was now being made of red cheesecloth.

At the bottom of it, barely hidden there would be a flashlight which would be kept going all the time, of course!

Oh, the party was going to be splendid. Miriam knew that.

And yet—and yet—she wished she knew why they had a party—not that she didn't want a party! But just why was it for this evening with the strange name.

"Why, Miriam," her mother said that afternoon late as she caught sight of Miriam's little worried face, "this isn't the time to look sad when we're having a party.

"What is the trouble, my darling?"

There was something in the understanding, sweet way that her mother asked her that made Miriam ask what she thought was so foolish a question.

"Mother, dear," she began, "just what does Halloween mean?"

"October thirty-first," her mother said, "is the night of All Saints' day, or Halloween, for hallow means a time devoted to holy purposes and een is short for evening. So that it means the evening before the religious day which is known as All Saints' day.

"But Halloween, while coming before a religious day, has always been an evening of festivity and frolic and fun for children.

"In all countries they celebrate it—it is a real children's evening—though in various countries the children have their own little ways of celebrating.

"Our way, though, is used by children of many countries and we have make-believe witches just as they have, for in the olden days in the old countries those who were superstitious or given to imagining things not so, thought witches came out on Halloween."

And somehow, Miriam never enjoyed a party so much, for it was so nice to know just what the day meant and to know, too, that in many countries children on this very evening were having a celebration of such a weirdly, wonderful kind!

Vegetable and Fruit Dishes

By NELLIE MAXWELL

A SALAD is at all meals a welcome part of the menu after the breakfast of the day.

Tomato Aspic.

Take two cupfuls of stewed tomato to which a slice of onion has been added, with seasoning of salt. Boil 20 minutes and strain. Add two tablespoonfuls of gelatin dissolved in one-half cupful of cold water and add to the tomato. Such seasonings as bay leaf, celery and cayenne may be added to the tomato while cooking if desired. Mold and serve when chilled on leaf lettuce with a highly seasoned salad dressing to which a half cupful of nuts has been added.

Browned Carrots.

Parboil small even-sized carrots and lay them well drained around the roast of mutton; baste often from the fat in the pan. Serve around the roast.

Wisconsin Cherry Duff.

Take two tablespoonfuls of sugar one-fourth of a cupful of butter, one-half cupful of sweet milk, one egg, one-half cupful of flour, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, and one cupful of sweet canned cherries. Serve with Cherry Sauce.

Take one cupful of the cherry juice, thicken with one teaspoonful of cornstarch, add one-third of a cupful of sugar, a pinch of salt and a tablespoonful of butter just before serving. Flavor with a few drops of almond after the sauce has been well cooked.

Peach Betty.

Take the soft crumbs from the center of the loaf of bread. Mix with one-half cupful of butter to three cupfuls of crumbs. Put a layer of the buttered crumbs into a baking dish and lay over them a layer of sliced peaches; sprinkle with sugar, a grating of orange peel and bake one hour. Cover the dish during the first half hour, then remove and brown. Serve hot with cream and sugar.

Apple Whip.

Take one-fourth of a cupful of steamed, riced apple, add powdered sugar to sweeten, beat into one egg white, beat until stiff. Serve with cream.

CAPITAL of the HITTITES

Hittite Double-Headed Eagle Found at Boghaz Keouy.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

IN THE heart of Asia Minor, about a hundred miles east of Angora, the traveler interested in the past will find a rich field. It is Boghaz Keouy, the ruined capital of the Hittites.

Boghaz Keouy means the "village of the throat," for it is at the end of a deep valley that the modern Turkish village lies, in northern Cappadocia and the Hittites of the Sixteenth and Fifteenth centuries B. C. built their great fortified city on the rocky hillsides above the mouth of this valley.

Whether it was Subbi Lulluma or some other musically named gentleman who laid out this city of many great buildings and strong fortifications, he certainly possessed an appreciation of natural beauty as well as statesmanship, for, as one climbs from point to point—from the palace up to the great citadel; from one rock, crowned with massive ruins, to another still more stupendous—one hardly knows which to wonder over and admire more, the strength and skill displayed in these three or four thousand-year-old remains or the glorious views that greet one's eyes at every turn.

From one corner of the citadel, by the remains of a round tower, you look straight down four or five hundred feet of rock into the gloom of a narrow gorge, at the bottom of which a stream flows darkly, and you can see little but the rock over which you lean and the swallows that flash in and out of the gorge, and the eagles that sail to their nests on the opposite crags. On another side of the citadel, at the foot of the precipice, the same stream winds softly through trees and grass and flowers, where willows whiten in the breeze and a mill clacks merrily. Here is to be seen the rare black stork sailing proudly through the valley.

On the less steep side of the citadel several trenches have been dug by excavators. In the earth thrown out of these trenches peasants have planted their grain, and thus, fertilizing their seed with Hittite remains, they have raised an abundant crop with little labor.

All over the flat top of this acropolis, as well as everywhere else in the city, one may pick up any quantity of broken pieces of ancient pottery—brown, black, and every shade of red and every degree of fineness. Much of this pottery is painted, most of it with simple decoration resembling that on the proto-Corinthian or geometric vases. Some of it has a beautiful glaze; some is covered with a white slip and painted in three or four colors, while most of it has simply black or dark red markings on red pottery.

Modern Symbols Used by Hittites.

A visit to Boghaz Keouy not only makes one feel quite intimate with the Hittites, but also one sees here that they did many of the things that we associate with much later peoples. Did the Turks first use the star and crescent; or even the Greeks of ancient Byzantium? No, indeed; here at Boghaz Keouy (and in the later Hittite city, near Aintab, in South Turkey) the star and crescent may be seen where it was carved in the rocks a thousand years before Byzantium was founded.

Did the Austrians or Russians, or the old Byzantines, or the German empire first use the double-headed eagle? None of them. Everywhere in Hittite sculptures we find this symbol. The first people, probably, who practiced the noble sport of falconry were the Hittites—so the sculptures tell us. And in that connection it was interesting to find that local Turkish gentlemen train and use falcons in hunting now.

Here on the citadel explorers unearthed a library of clay tablets all written in cuneiform characters, some of them in the Hittite language, but more in the Assyrian. All these tablets were taken to Constantinople before the World war.

Of the tablets that have been read, one gives the Assyrian text of the treaty between the great Rameses of Egypt and the powerful Hittite king, Khattu-Sil, that treaty of which the Egyptian text was already well known to historians.

And another tablet, as Professor Sayce tells us, shows how much women had to do with politics in those far-off days, since it is a letter from Naptere, the wife of Rameses, addressed to the Hittite queen, and expresses her great satisfaction over the conclusion of the treaty.

Political Intrigues Revealed.

Another great library was found in two rooms at the eastern side of the palace. Some of these tablets are very large, 12 by 8 inches in size; others are but two inches long. They are mostly of about the same time as the Tel el Amarna tablets, and so cover the age of Moses.

Professor Sayce also tells us that many of these Boghaz Keouy tablets were written by the same disaffected governors of Syrian provinces, who, in the Tel el Amarna tablets, write to Pharaoh of the difficulties in the way of maintaining the rights of the Egyptian government in Syria, but tell how nobly they were working in their lord's interests, while in these newly found writings of Boghaz Keouy the same men tell the Hittite king how they are pretending to be the humble servants of Egypt while really obeying the commands of Khattu-Sil, and the political intrigues that are here displayed and the polite sarcasm and meaningless phrases that pass between these old writers might give points to modern diplomatists.

Shepherds and laborers who wander over these hills pick up occasionally broken pieces of tablets, and, knowing that any writing on clay or stone seems precious in the eyes of "these queer Europeans," they offer what they find for sale to any passer-by. As one eats one's dinner a boy appears, and, squatting on his heels, produces a few bits of clay from his girdle, or wrapped in a handkerchief (which challenges comparison in age and in dirt with the Hittite contents) or one is awakened in the early dawn by a head stuck between the curtains of the tent and an insinuating voice saying "kyramidi" (clay, tiles), the owner thereof being anxious to strike a bargain quickly, before he takes his sheep up on the hills above.

The sudden stopping of the history which the tablets tell, as well as the condition of the ruins unearthed, shows us that some time in the Thirteenth century B. C. the great city was destroyed, probably by a sweeping down of some barbarian horde, thus anticipating (long ages before) the story of the destruction of Rome. And this Hittite capital was never again inhabited or rebuilt, for there is apparently no trace of Greek or Roman work or influence in the remains. The Hittite power, however, was not destroyed then. Cilicia and the southern part of Cappadocia have numerous monuments which show occupancy by Hittite people till about the Eighth century B. C.

Amazon on the Eastern Gate.

As one walks away from the citadel in Boghaz Keouy to see the various points of special interest within the five-mile circuit of the ancient walls he comes first to the one place on this site where there has been found any inscription in the Hittite hieroglyphics (those hieroglyphics which are so common all through the more southern Hittite country). This one inscription of Boghaz Keouy is so badly worn by time and weather that it is quite illegible. Further down the hill slope is the Eastern gate. Like the other city entrances, this has two parts, with a square room between the outer and inner gate. The posts of the real door curve in toward the top, as if they once formed a pointed arch. This Eastern gate has long been known and is of grand proportions, but it is only relatively recently that workmen discovered, almost by accident, on the inner side post, a remarkable bas-relief. This is a figure, about ten feet high, of an Amazon, apparently, and bears little resemblance to the figures found in other distinctively Hittite places.

Following the wall, we come to the famous Southern gate, which admitted to the city the commerce and travel from Cilicia, and which is still guarded by the lion posts, always pictured in every description of Boghaz Keouy. Fine, upstanding lions they are, too, with wide-open jaws and curly hair.

From between the lions one looks outward and downward to a marvelous stretch of hill and dale, while on the inside he looks across the mile and a quarter of the city limits, sloping down from this point 870 feet to its northern end. Here and there on the slope rise the great rock fortresses, each bearing on its summit more or less of Hittite masonry.

THE DOG RANGE AND WOLVES

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

LOTH had removed the bandage and washed the wound when he heard voices. Somehow, coming just now, they made him uneasy. He had seen blood on the muzzle of Range that morning.

He would have called Ann, but she was in the other room looking after Izette, who was nearly as bad off as Champ.

The voices were approaching. Loth examined the wound carefully. It was satisfactory and he replaced the bandages with fresh ones.

His rifle was in a corner, but he was just as good with revolvers at their range, and they were handier.

The outside door opened in this room and the one into the other was closed. Izette had been restless during the night and her sister wished to shut out sounds. Loth bent over his patient.

"Remember, you're a man, Champ," he said in a low voice, "more than twelve years old. Your sister Ann has hardly slept in a week. I hoped Izette could get quiet that Ann might find some rest today. Try not to disturb them, no matter what you hear outside."

The boy nodded, his steady eyes regarding the man intently.

"Of course," he assented. "But it's odd Izette's worse off, when she was wounded like me."

"You don't quite understand," gently. "Izette's only a little girl, while you're a big, strong man. Besides she had a bad fall when you stumbled over the high bank in the darkness. It was a terrible experience for a little girl to go through."

Again the boy nodded, his eyes still regarding the man. In them were devotion and hero worship.

"S'pose 'twas pretty bad, she being only seven. But I'm thinkin' now how funny 'twas you happened to be there right in the nick o' time."

"I was sort of looking out."

"Like you was when the bull moose charged me an' I was saved from being a goner, an' when I took the cub an' papa an' mamma grizzly rushed for me not ten yards off. You came from behind a rock, but didn't have time for anything 'cept to grab me, cub an' all, an' jump forty feet from the cliff into the river. That was busy fun's I ever had. The odd thing was that you happened to be—sort of lookin' out. An' there's been other times."

"You never told your sister anything about me being there?" quickly.

"Course not. You told me not to. But I never could see why. Once I heard you say you liked Ann an' I know she likes darin' things. She's that way herself. I don't guess Ann ever had any thought 'bout you being in the country till that night the wolves chased us—an' still, I don't know. Ann's mighty quick to scent out things, though what she finds out she keeps to herself, mostly." The boyish eyes grew perplexed. "I don't see what you stay off so for," he complained, almost fretfully. "You ain't scared of grizzlies nor anything in the world 'cept just Ann, an' she's gentle as—as anything, an' the best girl in the world, if she is my sister. I wish we could go back to our old home in the forest away from this crowded together country an' the schoolin' sis brought us for. Taint no good here, with four houses right in sight of each other an' not so many miles apart. We 'long to the woods, not to fussin' close neighborhoods. What I wish for more'n anything else in all this world is for you an' her to get friends, an' then you build a cabin right near to us. Then you an' me could go huntin' an' fishin' an' you could teach me whiles. An' Ann could teach me some, too. Both of you know more'n that teacher who come to get us t'other day. Said she got 50 cents a month for teaching, an' had twelve. Talked so much 'bout me an' Izette havin' to come that I up an' told her she didn't know as much as either of you, an' then she said what could folks expect for $6 a month an'—"

"That's Range," said Loth quietly, with a hard glint in his eye the boy didn't see. "Very likely Range couldn't find any game in the woods round here, and has come back for his breakfast. I'll go and see."

"Breakfast—that growl?" scorned the boy, after Loth had slipped out and closed the door softly behind him. "It's a grizzly growl, a dozen grizzlies' growl. He rumbled like that when he faced the pack of wolves."

It was a pack of wolves Range was facing now. His fangs showed, and from behind them came the deep rumble of battle.

Six men were closing round in front, all with rifles. Loth stepped before the dog.

"Out of the way," ordered the leader of the assailants, harshly. "That's a sheep killer, an' we want him."

"We'll walk off a little way."

"Then bring the dog along," threateningly. "He's killed two sheep, one last night and one the night before an' now we're out for him. Get me?"

Loth didn't answer. He walked 300 or 400 yards, dropping a hand now and then upon the dog's head to keep him on the side away from the men. Not even the mistress or the young master had such control over the big dog as Loth. Though he had lived apart from the forest home and kept himself hidden for the most part, he and the dog had gone on many a hunt together.

"Now, men, I want a little talk with you," he said, when he stopped and faced them.

"All right," was the surly answer, "when we've killed that ugly brute. Either he'll fly at us or make a dash into the woods, whar no one could find him. Two sheep—"

"I don't often ask a favor of any man," said Loth, still quietly, "but I do now. Let me tell—"

"Stand away from that dog or we'll—hey, what!" for two revolvers were menacing them.

"Let your weapons drop on the ground," coldly. "The first one who lifts one so much as an inch I'll drop. This dog beside me is worth the whole bunch of you, and rather than have him killed I will kill you all. That's right," as the rifles rattled to the ground. "Now, hands up, quick, and listen! I was willing to talk fair, but you're a set of cheap—"

"Careful," broke in the one who had spoken first. "I'm sheriff, an' all but two of these are my dep'ties. The other two are owners of the killed sheep. We've heard tell something 'bout you, Hank Loth, an' the way ye handle weepons, an' something 'bout your demon dog that tackles an' kills a b'ar. We counted for trouble, mebbe. That's why I say be careful. We're the law. The whole gov'ment is back of us. It's like this—first, we kill the dog, then we talk if you want to—though it's likely we'll punish ye some for contempt of court."

His hands were commencing to lower when something in the eyes behind the barrels caused them to stiffen up spasmodically.

"D—don't shoot," he stuttered. "I'm sh-sh-sheriff. It's high treason."

"All right," evenly, "I've changed my mind about putting up fairness to you. You're not intelligent and human enough for that. I had thought of fastening the dog except when out with him and offering his wonderful record against two sheep. Range is so intelligent that I could soon teach him the difference between sheep and wild animals. But that would be above your heads. So I'll just mention a few things and let you go. To my personal knowledge Range has saved more than twenty lives, and I don't know half his history. About the house he is as gentle as a kitten and perfectly safe with children. Miss Candish was bringing her brother and sister nearer to civilization in hope of better schooling for them. She had always lived in the remote forest with her father, who was an ardent naturalist and hunter. After he died they preferred to remain until now. Coming here, a pack of wolves attacked them, and but for the dog, with a little help from me, all would have been killed. It seems to me such a dog, with nothing against him but two paltry sheep, for which he isn't really to blame, should—"

"Be killed," yelled the sheriff as Loth's life half turned at a step behind. The man had been waiting for any possible chance, and now his hand darted for his rifle. But before it could be raised to a level a shot rang out, the bullet evidently striking the barrel, for there was a clink of metal, a howl from the man and the weapon fell back to the ground.

"Hold your hands up again, high," called a clear, girlish voice. "Mr. Loth, you go and search them for revolvers. Draw charges from them and from the rifles and take away all their ammunition. Then we'll start them down the slope and if they come back shoot them. They act to me more like a gang of desperadoes than officers."

"We'll show what we are when we come back," raged the sheriff.

"We have two good rifles waiting," warned the girl, "and you're the man they'll pick."

She waited calmly until they were out of sight, then whirled to Loth.

"There's the boat we poled up the river the last forty miles," she cried. "The current back is swifter than we could go, even if we had horses. Then we'll strike straight into the woods to the old forest home. We'll all love to go back and you can educate the children. Don't you understand?" at the look on his face. "Father's dead and his position is gone, and I—I've changed my mind. I've known all the time that you were watching over us, out of sight, and—have liked it. We'll be married at the old minister's on the way back. Now, let's hurry. The children are well enough to start in the boat."

Spontaneous Combustion

When large quantities of soot, linen paper, cotton or woolen stuff, ship's cables, etc., become soaked with relatively small amounts of oils (especially drying oils) and are exposed to a limited access of air, they may take fire sooner or later. The presence of moisture, frequently aids spontaneous combustion, and piles of damp hay, freshly mown grass, sometimes take fire spontaneously. The phenomenon is not, however, without a clearly defined cause. Fats and oils can be shown to undergo a slow process of combustion at but slightly elevated temperatures. Combustion of a small amount of oil causes the evolution of a corresponding amount of heat; rise of temperature accelerates the combustion, producing a further degree of heat, until at a given moment the temperature may become so high as to cause the mass to burst into flame.

Tourist Finds Hell in Polish Summer Resort

Dante had nothing on the ordinary citizen of Danzig, who can go to Hell and back every day, if he pleases. In Hell (or as it is sometimes spelled, Hel or Hela) Poland has its leading summer resort.

"How can I go to Hell?" I asked the hotel porter one morning.

"That's easy," he replied. "A boat right at the foot of the river will take you across the bay to Hell." So I crossed the Styx into Hell.

Hell, however, turned out not to be all that it's cracked up to be. One hears they follow the Russian style of natural bathing costumes there, but at least during my short visit, Hell had reformed. All I saw were two or three small beer gardens, a lot of fishing huts and an open stretch of beach with bathhouses here and there. Not even a goldfish or a devilfish in sight!

As a place to raise h—l, however Hell cannot quite come up to Zoppot, fifteen miles from Danzig, where they have three roulette tables, etc., etc.—From a Danzig Letter in the Brooklyn Eagle.

Does Weakness Detract From Your Good Looks?

San Francisco, Calif.—"About two years ago I was weak and rundown in health. I suffered so much with backache and pain in my side, and did not get any relief until I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. A few bottles of the 'Prescription' was a permanent benefit to me and I am glad to recommend it to others for I believe it will do for them what it did for me."—Mrs. E. Webb, 1103 Laguna St.

Gem for University Library

A book printed 422 years ago, less than a century after the art was invented, has come into the possession of the University of Iowa Law library. It classifies English ecclesiastical law of the time, and, conforming to an ancient custom, the textual material is printed in the center of the page, while around it are comments of learned lawyers of the day. Hardly a third of each page is devoted to text matter. The volume was printed in France, in red and black ink, with all capitals illuminated. It was presented to the university by Irma L. McCloud of Washington of the class of 1880.

The American Spirit

President Green of the American Federation of Labor was condemning soviet Russia and labor's proposed affiliation with it.

"I hate," he ended, "the soviet spirit of envy and destruction. Give me its direct opposite, the American spirit that says:

"'Hats off to the past, coats off to the future!'"

HOW MRS. WEAVER WAS HELPED

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

As Mrs. Weaver herself says, "I was never very strong." This is a mild statement describing her condition, for, according to her letters, she was subjected to no small amount of ill health. Fortunately, her sister was familiar with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged Mrs. Weaver to try it. "After three or four weeks," writes Mrs. Weaver, "I felt a great difference in myself. I would go to bed and sleep sound, and although I could not do very much work, I seemed stronger. I kept on taking it and now I am well and strong, do my work and take care of three children. I sure do tell my friends about your wonderful medicine, and I will answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Lawrence Weaver, East Smithfield St., Mt. Pleasant, Pa.

If you knew that thousands of women suffering from troubles similar to those you are enduring had improved their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, wouldn't you think it was worth a trial?

In some families, the fourth generation is learning the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Boy Scouts Do Stunts

BOY SCOUT TROOP 29

Friday night was "Visitors Night" at troop No. 29 headquarters in the Baptist church school room. After the usual business, a number of the scouts engaged in exhibition tests for first aid and merit badges.

Patrol No. 1 under the direction of Patrol Leader Walter Dunn, conducted a circus with a number of side shows. Walter Schachtebeck took the part of strong-man and expert knife thrower. Jean Fowler as a wild man was a roaring success. Eddie Russell as the ever-ready handy man certainly filled the bill. James Jamison as circus agent and ticket-collector worked hard to make the show a success. Arthur Hengstler the animal trainer showed fine skill in presenting his part.

At the conclusion of the circus, which was pronounced a great success, the scouts served refreshments of cake, pie and chocolate.

During the evening the troop was visited by Scout Executive Elwood Barley who presented the troop with its charter as a Veteran troop. In making the presentation, Mr. Barley said that he hoped the troop would respond to the efforts of the Scoutmaster Rev. W. S. Dunn, and seek to advance in all branches of scoutcraft, so as to fit themselves for the future duties of good citizens.

MISSION BEACH WOMAN'S CLUB

Last meeting held on Friday, Oct. 28. Mrs. Margaret Olive Jordon spoke on the topic "Old Books and New." Mrs. W. Fisher gave an outline of community chest work. The Choral club rendered some selections. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Pauline Miller and Mrs. R. V. Jones.

On Navy day the Arts and Crafts class members were guests of Mrs. J. McNulty and her husband on an inspection tour of the U. S. S. California. The next meeting of the class will be an all-day affair beginning at 10 a. m. A pot luck luncheon will be served. Mrs. W. R. Lyons, president of the San Diego Arts and Crafts, and Mrs. C. H. Pfiefer of the East San Diego Arts and Crafts, will be present to teach the work on under glass trays and pictures.

As the next regular club day falls on Armistice day the club will meet on Monday, Nov. 14, at Shirley cottage. There will be a luncheon served to which the public is invited. The day is in charge of the civic department under the chairmanship of Mrs. Eugene Paynter.

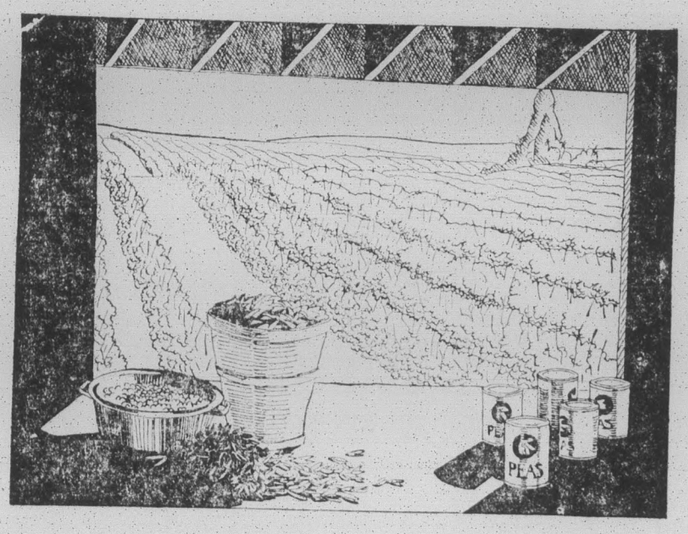
"PETITS POIS" ARE "PETTED PEAS"



WHAT is there about a French label either on food or clothes which makes the article so much more interesting? It must be the French reputation for excellency in cookery as well as dressmaking. No one will deny that "Pate de Fois Gras" sounds a lot more aristocratic than "Goose Liver." Just so with "Petits Pois" which have always been considered a very great delicacy and came originally from France. "Petted Peas" they are facetiously called by canners because they require more coddling than any others.

What Epicures Say

When being prepared for canning, peas are graded by 32nds of an inch and the tiny ones belonging to the "Petits Pois" classification will pass through holes only 9/32 of an inch in diameter. But real epicures do not like the extremely small peas. They maintain that the larger sizes possess more nutriment. In fact they declare the choicest peas and the ones which have the choicest flavor are those which are cooked without sifting just as they come from the garden.

An Unusual Recipe

This extremely nutritious vegetable is one of the most successful of canned products, and is third in point of vegetable popularity. With its valuable aid the housewife can devise many tempting, dainty dishes. Here is a pea puree which is different: rub through a colander one can of peas, add a little boiling water or soup stock. Cut several slices of bacon in small pieces, put in a frying pan and cook until crisp, add one onion cut in dice, and continue cooking with the bacon until brown. Add salt and pepper to taste. Serve like mashed potato, pouring the bacon and onion over it before serving.

THE LONG VALLEY DAM

With the completion of the Owens River aqueduct in 1913, the curtain dropped for a brief intermission—the first heroic act of a great human had been completed. It had revealed the genius and the courage of man pitted against the stubborn and forbidding forces of nature. The aqueduct, once only a dream of an engineer, was now a reality. The people of Los Angeles, who only a few years before had faced the menace of a killing water shortage, now were provided with a gigantic waterway. Rapidly there was to follow other scenes and other acts in this Owens Valley drama. Their setting was to be in the midst of the matchless scenic grandeur of the towering Sierra Nevadas, but their action was to revolve about the age old problem of conflicting human purposes. The illustration shows a view of Halwee reservoir, one of the aqueduct's storage basins, and a portraiture of President R. F. Del Valle, of the L. A. Water and Power commission.
